CWMTILLERY INVESTS IN OPTIMAX FROM HEGLA

Cwmtillery Glass based in South Wales has recently further streamlined production with the installation of a HEGLA Optimax cutting table with laser technology and two loading systems comprising a double sided loader and a shuttle loader, providing the double sided loader with considerably more glass types. The investment has enabled the company to increase cutting productivity and works in unison with the two Bystronic I G Speedlines that were installed last year.

With demand increasing for the various glass types manufactured at the company, Managing Director Paul Hayward, wanted to simplify production methods and increase efficiency down the production line.

DISTINCTION'S NXT-GEN MAKES BUSINESS EASY FOR

Composite door manufacturer Doorsmart Ltd added Distinction's nxt-gen door to its portfolio last year and Director Craig Broadley says it's made business much easier. "The door is far easier to manufacture and has less wastage but for us the stand out innovation is the flush-fitted beading. It has reduced our stockholding because all the doors come with a pre-fit internal bead and therefore there is no need for cassettes. It's helped us with order processing too because there are fewer component parts to order and hold in stock. It's design technology at its best and has made a big difference to our business."
